

Alaitz Intxaustegi is a PhD student in the Language and Cognition Research Group at the University of Girona (Spain). After several years of experience as an Educational Psychologist, she began her PhD as part of the project "Advanced language and socio-cognitive skills in children with and without language disorders", funded by the Spanish Ministry of Science and Education.

Her research focuses on understanding how emotional states intertwine with social cognition, examining how emotional state and social-cognitive skills influence each other. Additionally, she is beginning a new avenue of research, exploring how social-cognitive skills are manifested and applied in multilingual contexts
