

- Chen, L., & Durrleman, S. (2022). Comprehension of Mandarin Aspect markers by Preschool Children with and without Developmental Language Disorder. Frontier in Psychology, 13, article 839951. doi: 10.3389/fpsyg.2022.839951
- Chen, L. An, S., and He, X. (2021). A comparative analysis of the production of aspect markers by Mandarin-speaking children with developmental language disorders and by their typically developing peer. Journal of Child Language Acquisition and Development, 9(1), 189-208.
- Chen, L. & Wang, F. (2021). The Sentence-final Particle *le*₂ in Mandarin Chinese. Modern Chinese, 705(03), 25-30. (In Chinese)
- Chen, L., & Wang, F. (2020). The language impairment in children with autism spectrum is different from children with specific language impairment. The Science Education Article Collects, 498(06), 178-180. (In Chinese)
- Chen, L., & Wang, F. (2020). Analysis on modern Chinese aspect markers based on formal syntax. Modern Chinese, 695(05), 58-62. (In Chinese)
- Chen, L. (2018). The difference between Chinese-Mandarin aspect markers zai- and *-zhe*₁. Internal and External of Chinese Class, 559(19), 300. (In Chinese)
- Chen, L. (2014). A study on the current situation of non-English major college students' English reading strategy at applied universities. English Square·Academic Research, 43(07), 85-87. (In Chinese)
- Chen, L. (2014). The ten-year research on English reading strategy of domestic university students. Journal of Xi'an Shiyou University (Social Science Edition), 23(01), 108-112. (In Chinese)